PREFACE.

The present issue of the NEWPORT DIRECTORY is especially a Summer Residents number. The Street List has been enlarged by placing the names of owners of villas in their proper locations on the streets, thereby enabling one to find such residences much more easily. The names of villa owners have also been located on the map, making that a very good guide to the city in itself. Our List of Summer Residents is as full and accurate as possible, and is a valuable addition to the Directory.

It is our aim to present to the public a work not only neat and attractive in appearance, but correct in every particular, and which shall prove of practical value to all using it. To do this, the hearty co-operation of all is necessary, as every one must see, and we take pleasure in saying that we have met with courtesy and kindness from all in our canvass of the city.

We have preserved all the features of the book which have proved serviceable in former years, and have introduced some new ones in this number, which we hope will win universal approbation. The General Directory contains 7912 names, including 295 removals and deaths. Of this number, 1203 are new names. Ten hundred and eighty-six (1086) names have been erased. The List of Summer Residents contains 509 names.

STREET DIRECTORY

—AND GUIDE TO—

SUMMER RESIDENCES,

(See also List of Summer Residents on page 313.)

GIVING the location of the Streets, Places, Parks, Squares, etc., and showing what other streets and places run from them, or across them, with the number at which they intersect, taken from the official records.

From this list, the location of any number on a street, or the location of any public building, can be easily ascertained; as, for instance, wishing to know at what part of Broadway No. 220 is located, you look at Broadway upon page 23, and find that Gould Street runs from 202, and Park Street from 226, showing that 220 would come on the left, between Gould and Park Streets.

When a street crosses another, numbers (or ciphers) are given on both sides; but when it begins or ends at that street, the number is given only on the side at which it intersects. Ciphers are used where no numbers exist.

The Key to Success in Business.

—BY—

A. G. SCHOLFIELD,

—PRINCIPAL OF—

Scholfield's Commercial College,

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Copyright 1890, by A. G. Scholfield,

The Intellectual Advantage to the Student, of the Study of Book-keeping, as it is Taught in Scholfield's Commercial College.

There is no study that one can take up and pursue for the same limited time, that combines as much in variety, and that can so effectually discipline the mind in reasoning from cause to effect, and that can so intellectually and effectually equip him, or her, for the various duties of life as the study of Double Entry Bookkeeping under a competent teacher. This study secures to the student an easy, graceful and legible hand writing. This study compels its students to acquire a thorough knowledge of commercial Arithmetic as a preliminary qualification for the study of Bookkeeping. This study in its practical details, as pursued in this college, also requires its students to write all the letters of business correspondence suggested by the business which is the subject of the students' lessons. Our students are required to write all these letters and to submit them for criticism and when corrected to copy them into his Book of Forms for future reference. The laws of business to which every persons' business is subject more or less, in its conduct and its records, are also here taught in all their practical details in connection with Bookkeeping.

This study embodies not only the foregoing preliminary considerations, but it calls into requisition certain fundamental governing principles, a thorough knowledge of which the student must acquire before he can commence or pursue understandingly the study of either single or double entry. Intellectually equipped with a thorough knowledge of these elementary governing principles, the student proceeds alone, aided by a competent teacher withal, to solve understandingly in the Day Book, Journal and Ledger and auxiliary books, the various actual business transactions which are the subjects of the students' lessons in both Single and Double entry. So definite, clear and available, to satisfy any inquiry which may arise in the business they represent are these business records, made under our supervision, that the student becomes at once fascinated in pursuing this very interesting and most important branch of education.

Finally, the time having come when the net gain or loss in the business of the past should be ascertained, that business the records of which are rendered in conformity with correct principles and their subordinate rules; the student proceeds to perform this task by making a Grand Balance Sheet, which sheet combines a Trial Balance, a Balance Sheet and a Profit and Loss Sheet, his Grand Balance Sheet made from the Ledger constitutes a mathematical process by which both gross and net gain or loss in the business in the past is ascertained and proven beyond a doubt. The student having intelligently solved the profit and loss problem under consideration, proceeds to close the Profit and Loss account in the Ledger into the account or accounts to which it is subordinate. Having availed himself of the rare opportunity offered in Scholfield's Commercial College, for acquiring a thorough business education, and having under the guidance of its principal and his assistants opened a set of business books in double entry, penned their records daily, weekly and monthly, solved every problem demanded of the Accountant from day to day, and closed the business into Profit and Loss correctly and understandingly, the student realizes for the first time that he holds the intellectual key to the science of double entry bookkeeping—the key to success in business and to a competency through life. What enterprising young gentleman or lady does not covet such an accomplishment? A word to the wise is sufficient.

IMPORTANCE OF A BUSINESS EDUCATION AS A SPECIALTY, AND WHERE TO OBTAIN IT.

The great and all-absorbing question that forces itself upon the mind of every enterprising young man, on retiring from the grammar school, or when about to leave the parental roof, and aspiring to business pursuits, is, How can he procure business honorable and remunerative? The common impression among this class of young men is, that with a common school education, they are fully prepared to enter upon nearly all the active duties of life. Delusive conclusion.

Young man, be not deceived. Between yourself and the business to which you aspire, is the counting room with its multitudinous demands, details and results; legal, prudential and financial; and you cannot effectually and successfully reach the one without the other.

Your grammar school education is all very well, so far as it goes, and is of great importance to you; but it does little or nothing in preparing you for the special duties of an accountant; duties already claiming your attention, and for which you must prepare yourself sooner or later, or sacrifice the rewards resulting from the performance of those duties. You may, it is true, succeed in securing employment in some subordinate position, a position that may afford you profitable lessons in the drudgery of business, accompanied with its compensating pay; but if you would aspire to anything higher, if you would procure and retain employment, both honorable and remunerative, if you would be prepared to conduct business on your own account, with a fair prospect of success, you must first acquire a knowledge of accounts, which accounts scientifically displayed and rendered, reveal the past effectually, and are in importance to the business man, second only to business, the details of which they represent. But will the inexperienced young man reply to this by saying that he does not care to take a situation as an accountant, and as to business, his own, if he ever reaches it, he hopes to be able to employ an accountant, and thus obtain relief from the accountant's duties?

In reply to the first objection, I would say, that your interest in the science of accounts does not depend upon whether or not you wish employment at once as an accountant. If you contemplate business on your own account in the future, or in any situation involving on your part, financial responsibilities, a knowledge of bookkeeping is indispensable, and should receive your earliest attention. Furthermore, there is no position in one's business more honorable, none as well paid, and none that will advance a young man so rapidly and profitably in all that appertains to business and its results, and that so thoroughly fits a young man for business, his own, as the position of the accountant.

His connection with his employer is such that he acquires from him that business tact and talent, that it has taken his employer years, and often fortunes to acquire, and thus he is enabled, at a proper time, to start in business with the experience of his former employer. In reply to the second objection, I would say, if you would know your own business, you must know how to keep your own accounts, whilst you entrust the keeping of them to another.

Nothing is more easy than for an accountant to deceive, and embezzle from his employer large sums of money without fear of detection, when his employer is ignorant of the science of bookkeeping.

The frequent cases of embezzling from employers that come to our notice through the newspapers, should serve as a sufficient warning to the wise and prudent business man, and those preparing to fill his place. The wise and sagacious business man will not let the success of his business rest upon the honesty or dishonesty of his bookkeeper; but, having become a thorough accountant, he is prepared to detect any fraudulent entry made upon his books, to disguise the acts of a dishonest bookkeeper. He is thus prepared to detect any disguise at once, and to remove the rogue in time to save his fortune from plunder, and himself from bankruptcy. From the foregoing facts and deductions, it must be apparent to the reader, that every enterprising young man should, before entering the arena of business, either as a principal or subordinate, acquire a thorough knowledge of bookkeeping, which includes not only the science of accounts, but also all the incidental business formulas and correspondence.

The only question remaining to be settled is, where can this education be obtained most effectually and economically?

Is it in the grammar school, in the high school, public or private, in the counting room in actual business, or in the initiatory counting room under a practical accountant of long and varied experience in business affairs?

It is not in the grammar school, neither is it in the high school public or private, and for the following reasons: First, the teachers in these schools are not supposed to have had much, if any, practical experience as accountants.

In the absence of such experience, the teacher's success in teaching this important practical science must be, to say the least, extremely limited. Furthermore, in the schools in question, bookkeeping is invariably taught in connection with other studies, a small portion of the student's time being devoted to the study of bookkeeping, while the stern lessons of experience teach us that the study of bookkeeping alone, as a science, and as a specialty, is in its comprehensive scope and variety, all that the intellect can grasp and carry successfully to a practical and satisfactory maturity.

Neither is the counting-room in actual business the most suitable place to initiate the student into the science of accounts, and for obvious reasons.

First, it is well known that a very large percentage of our counting-rooms, in both city and country, practice only vague theories in their bookkeeping, which are hardly worth pursuing, and not worth learning. Again the demand for inexperienced or assistant bookkeepers in our first-class counting-rooms, is so extremely limited that not more than one in fifty of those interested and seeking the instruction these counting-rooms afford, could find admittance therein as students; hence, were this branch of education confined to those counting-rooms, forty-nine out of every fifty must from necessity remain ignorant of the science of accounts, and subject to all the disadvantages resulting from this ignorance in their future career. An experience of forty-four years as a practical accountant and teacher of the science of accounts, compels me to say, that the initiatory counting-room, with a thorough, efficient, practical accountant at its head, is the place where the student can acquire a knowledge of the science of accounts most effectually, the most speedily and the most economically, and for the following reasons:

First, the initiatory counting-room, under a competent principal, has all the talent and business experience in its faculty that the first-class counting-room in actual business combines. Besides, in the initiatory counting-room, the principal has time and opportunity to discuss before his students all subjects connected with their lessons more thoroughly and effectually than can be done in any counting-room in actual business. Again, the initiatory counting-room presents to its students, in a course of lessons requiring from three to four months to master, a greater variety of transactions, and in a greater variety of business, from the opening to the closing of books, annually and finally, than can be found in any counting-room in actual business, in two years' time. Furthermore, the initiatory counting-room avoids the repetition encountered in all actual business, and saves the student one and a half year's time, and the attendant expenses in the task of acquiring a business education, since in actual business he can reach the variety necessary, only through repetition, and with little, or no pay for his service.

Such an initiatory counting-room as above portrayed, is represented under the name of Scholfield's Commercial College.

• Whilst this college provides for its students rare and unsurpassed facilities for acquiring a business education, its merits are appreciated by a discriminating business public, from whom applications are being constantly made to the principal of this institution for young men and women to fill places of honor and trust in various parts of the country. These places are invariably filled by graduates of Scholfield's Commercial College, and without expense to either the employer or the employed. Thus the student has my aid and influence in procuring a situation, and is at liberty to call on me for any information appertaining to the science of accounts, without charge.

Twelve Thousand Students.

The branches of study here taught are Writing, Bookkeeping, Commercial Arithmetic, the common English branches, Phonography, Type Writing, Mechanical Drawing, Painting in Oil and Water Colors, Commercial Law and Business Correspondence.

NO CLASSES.

Each student is favored with separate instruction. The superior advantages that the principal of this College possesses for securing to its student-graduates remunerative employment will be always cheerfully conferred on such students. The demand upon us for our student-graduates Accountants during the last year has been greater in favor of Ladies than of Gentlemen. Will the Ladies qualify themselves to supply such future demand?
